Words from the CEO, Maari Ma

Probably one of the truest sayings in life is "You are what you eat." If you feed a growing child good healthy tucker, there is a much better chance that child will grow up big and strong.

Knowing what food is good for you (and bad for you) is half the challenge. Being able to prepare good healthy meals is the other half.

So it's great to see Wilcannia kids learning about healthy food through this cookbook as well as how to prepare it; both are skills for a healthy life. And the connection between healthy food and good strong teeth is also an important lesson for our children to learn. Maari Ma is keen to see all the Aboriginal children in our region grow up to reach their full potential and be leaders in their communities.

We are thankful to the sponsors of the cookbook for their support to see the cookbook come to life.

Congratulations to Carly, Jo and the Wilcannia kids for a great job.

Words from NSW Health

NSW Health established 'NSW Messages for a Healthy Mouth' in 2007. The key messages for this coordinated oral health promotional effort were:

Eat Well;
Drink Well;
Clean Well;
Play Well and Stay Well.

The promotion of healthy food options requires the partnership of parents, families, community organisations, school and experts in diet and nutrition. The Wilcannia Kids Cookbook is an outstanding example of partnerships in health to achieve improvement not only in oral health but in general health as well.

Many of our life-style related chronic diseases, including dental decay, are associated with common risk factors within our every day diet and environment.

By shifting our dietary options to simple, exciting, innovative and tasteful foods, which are low in sugars but nutritious, we prevent both systemic health problems and also dental problems. These recipes offer children and families a wide variety of nutritious food options to enjoy and protect their health.

I sincerely thank the contributors and organisations involved in developing and supporting the publication of this exciting Cookbook!
